NJASAP will join its Southwest Airlines Pilots' Association (SWAPA) peers in a support rally outside the Trump White House on Tuesday, Jan. 24, to call on the incoming president to reverse the U.S. DOT's decision to grant a foreign air carrier permit to Norwegian Air International (NAI). The unions have set a goal of having a combined total of 100 pilots attend the event. Rally information, including logistical details, can be accessed at this link: click here.

Just moments ago, NJASAP issued a news release that provides additional insight into the #DenyNAI issue as well as the call for the incoming president to #MakeItRight. The DOT's egregious, late-December decision is one that affects all aviation stakeholders: The fate of professional pilots from the perspective of advancing wages, benefits and work rules is tied together, and any change to the detriment of our peers employed by legacy carriers is one that will surely be felt across the industry. Because the DOT decision skews the playing field in favor of foreign competition, the stakes could not be higher for professional pilots. It is for this reason NJASAP has taken an active role in urging the incoming administration to overrule the Obama administration's decision.

Any pilot who lives in the DCA area or who is interested in attending is strongly encouraged to do so. This issue is of critical importance to every pilot working in professional aviation today. Please do not hesitate to contact Industry Affairs Committee Chair Capt. Coley George with any questions about this initiative.
